1 Kelly has never been one to conform to conventional business practices. Her innate desire to challenge the status quo and a relentless drive for better results influences how she approaches her work. One of her former CEOs would say she could see around corners. And she believes that is possible – there is an art and science to running a business and she subscribes to building accountability to achieve results.

2 She became one of only 150 certified Pinnacle Business Guides in the world want from their businesses. Pinnacle® is an evolution. They packed up some of the finest business tools on the planet—all curated from hundreds of time-tested books, proven systems and concepts—then custom designed for each business's unique climb—all to help teams gain the highest impact in the shortest amount of time. She has spent the past decade in sessions learning, and teaching leadership teams how to implement growth. It's not an easy journey, but in the end the view is incredible.

3 As a lifelong entrepreneur with years of experience in executive positions leading sales, operations, and human resources for companies ranging from $1M in revenue to $1.5B, Kelly knows that owning or leading a business is often overwhelming, stressful, and challenging. Kelly has found that organizational transformation and developing business execution excellence is where she thrives. As a national speaker, Kelly often leads discussions and presentations about mission-critical topics such as talent practices, leadership, and business effectiveness because she believes better talent means better business.
